DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

2. Claims 1-2, and 10-11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by White et al. (US 6,532,152 B1).

White teaches an impact protection device (2002, fig.13) having:

- A first interface (2017, fig. 14) configured to conform to a surface (shown in fig. 15, not numbered) of a digital watch portable computer device (a hand-held computer 200, fig. 15, with inherent function of a timepiece being able to be carried in a pocket may be a digital watch portable computer; referring to Merriam Webster Collegiate Dictionary) (claim 1)
  - A second interface (2016, fig. 14) configured to receive a peripheral component (2020, fig. 15) (claim 1)

- An impact absorbing material, an elastic material allowing transfer of energy through the material (see col. 26, lines 1-2, and lines 54-62) (claims 1 and 10-11)
- Where the portable computer has a slot (shown in fig. 16, not numbered) for receiving the peripheral component (claim 2).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 1-5, 9-13, 15-19, 213-24 and 26 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hanson et al. (US 2003/0071791 A1) in view of White et al.

Hanson teaches a system comprising:

- A digital watch portable computer (100, fig. 1; see explanation in paragraph 2) having a first slot (130, fig. 1) provided for receiving a first portion (a first interface, 150, fig. 1) of a peripheral component (10, fig. 1) (claims 2, 16 and 26)
- An impact protection device (160, fig. 1) having a second slot (a second interface, shown in fig. 2, not numbered) provided for receiving a second portion (170, fig. 2) of the peripheral component (claims 1, 15, and 26)

- Where peripheral component is a secure digital input/output (SDIO) card and the second interface is configured to receive the SDIO card when the SDIO card is inserted into the portable computer (see page 3, [0037]) (claims 3 and 17)
- Where the peripheral component protrudes outside the slot of the portable computer device for receiving the peripheral component (shown in fig. 1) (claims 4, 18 and 26)
- Where the portable computer has a front side (not numbered) where a display screen (110, fig. 1) is located, a back side (not numbered, fig. 1) opposite the front side, a right side and a left side, and wherein the slot for receiving the peripheral component is on the top side of the portable computer (shown in fig. 1) (claims 5 and 19)
- Wherein the protective device protects the protruding portion of the peripheral card when the peripheral card is inserted into the portable computer (shown in fig. 1) (claims 9 and 23)
- Where the portable computer is a cellular telephone (300, fig. 5) (claim 12)
- Where the portable computer is a personal digital assistant (PDA) (100, fig. 1) (claim 13)

Hanson fails to teach the impact protection device comprising an impact absorbing material.

~~White teaches an impact protection device (300, fig. Fig. 3A) comprising impact absorbing material (see col. 14, lines 12-19) (claims 1, 10-11, 15, 24 and 26).~~

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the device of Hanson with the impact protection device taught by White for purposes of effectively absorbing impacts from outside.

5. Claims 6-7, 20-21 and 27-28 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hanson in view of Ito (US 2003/0186570 A1).

Hanson discloses the claimed invention except the slot for receiving the peripheral component being on the side of the portable computer device.

Ito teaches a portable computer device (1, fig. 2) comprising a slot (9a, fig. 2) being on the side of the portable computer device (also see page 2, paragraph [0035]).

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the device of Hanson with the slot taught by Ito for sufficient space and convenience

6. Claims 8, 22 and 29 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hanson et al. in view of Cheng (US 2003/0148664 A1).

Hanson discloses the claimed invention except the slot for receiving the peripheral component being on the bottom of the portable computer device.

Cheng teaches a portable computer device (3, fig. 3) comprising a slot (at location 2, fig. 3) being on the bottom of the portable computer device.

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the device of Hanson with the slot taught by Cheng for sufficient space and convenience.

Allowable Subject Matter

7. The indicated allowability of claims 14 and 25, which have been canceled, is withdrawn in view of the definition of a watch given by Merriam Webster Collegiate Dictionary.
